TO LEAD FIGHT ON
LOW-TARIFF BILL*Pennsylvanians are Alarmed Over Threatened Legislation in House.*THIS STATE WILL SUFFER MOST*If Proposed Measure Becomes a Law, Manufacturers Say They Must Either Close Their Plants or Reduce Wages; Fight to be Made in Senate.

Special to The Courier.
WASHINGTON, April 21.—Alarmed over the destructive tariff legislation proposed by the Democrats in the House, representatives of manufacturing plants in Pennsylvania are appealing to Senator Penrose to organize a strong opposition in the Senate to the tariff slashing with a view to forcing concessions from the Democrats when the tariff bill reaches that body. Pennsylvania more than any other state will be affected by the reduction in rates agreed upon by the House Democrats in caucus. Since the tariff bill was made public representatives of nearly every Pennsylvania industry have come to Washington to discuss the situation with Senator Penrose.

As ranking member of the finance committee in the 51st Congress, Senator Penrose prevented the tariff reductions proposed by the downward revisionists in the House, which would have proven ruinous to the Keystone State's industries. As chairman of the finance committee in the following Congress he directed the fight in the Senate against the low tariff bills the Democratic House had passed.

If the new tariff rates become effective, Pennsylvania manufacturers say they will be compelled to either close their plants or reduce the wages of their employees. They have no hope of retaining the rates of the present protective tariff, but they hope that the small majority the Democrats have in the Senate may be overcome by Republican opposition and that amendments providing higher rates may be forced through. This, the manufacturers say, is the only thing that will save them.

That the bill will encounter determined opposition in the Senate is certain. The division among the House Democrats over free sugar and free wool will not prevent its passage in that body, but in the Senate the opposition of Senators from Louisiana and the best sugar producing States of the West, and Senators who oppose free wool, may bring about a situation in which the amendments demanded by the Pennsylvania manufacturers may be accepted through some sort of compromise. Senators from Pennsylvania are holding conferences daily with Republicans in the Senate and the chances of amendments in that body are being carefully considered. It is likely that within the coming week the Republican program will be adopted.

SON IS MORGAN'S HEIRBank of the Millionaire's Estate is Left to Him.

NEW YORK, April 21.—The will of J. Pierpont Morgan was made public on Saturday. The bulk of the estate, the value of which is not stated in the document, is left to the son, J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr. Many other bequests are made, however, ranging from $3,000,000 to a few thousands.

Among the specific bequests are $1,000,000 to his widow, an additional yearly income of $100,000, and use for life of the city and country house; $3,000,000 to J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., and the residue of the estate after $20,000,000 in specific bequests is paid; $3,000,000 each to three daughters, with the stipulation that Miss Annie Morgan may bequeath not more than $1,000,000 to her husband if she marries; $1,000,000 each to his son-in-law, Herbert L. Satterlee and William T. Hamilton; income of $1,000,000 to Jennie Roosevelt Tracy, widow of his brother-in-law; income of $1,000,000 each to two sisters-in-law; $1,000 to $5,000 each to the trustees of his home and elsewhere, except in banking house.

Banking house employees, equivalent of one year's salary each; Episcopal diocese of New York, $500,000; bequests to charities continued; capital in banking house and partnerships continued.

HEETER STILL SILENTReturns to Desk, but Refuses to Make Statement.

PITTSBURGH, April 21.—S. L. Heeter was at his desk again this morning in the office of superintendent of schools for the first time since he was acquitted of the charge brought against him by Ethel Ivy Fisher.

On Saturday Heeter refused to make a statement upon legal requisit, stating that he would probably make one Monday. When seen this morning he refused to make any comment on the outcome of the case.

The board of school directors will meet tomorrow. An effort is being made to have Heeter removed as superintendent.

WORTH A MILLION, CHICKEN THIEF TELLS HIS CAPTORS*They Decide to Let Man of Great Wealth Depart, Because No Constable is Near.

Special to The Courier.
SMITHFIELD, April 21.—A millionaire chicken-thief was captured at Anderson's Cross Roads on Friday, after a mile chase and considerable excitement. The man declared that he was worth a million dollars. Because there was no constable near, his captors said they believed him and let him go. He may be located later.

A man and his wife drove up to John H. Moser's store. The woman went in to do some shopping. Miss Emma Smith and others in the store heard a noise in Moser's henhouse and discovered the man standing in a field with the fowls in his hands.

When the party gave chase, the man dropped the birds, threw a few stones at his pursuers and then fled. Smith and Black, who were at the store, saw the man for a mile and captured him after a struggle. He was brought back to the store and released after a confabulation had been held.

The prisoner was indignant, declaring it an absurd situation for a millionaire.

CITY BILLS IN LIMELIGHTConnellsville Expected to Send Delegation to Clark Bill Hearings.

HARRISBURG, April 21.—Representatives from Connellsville are expected at the capitol tomorrow to attend a hearing of the subcommittee of the House Judiciary general committee on the Third Class City Bill, introduced by Senator Clark of Erie, which provides for the consolidation of form of government. The committee will spend a large part of Tuesday hearing the advocates and opponents of the measure. The Helderberg Small Council Bill for third class cities is coming along in the Senate and probably will reach the House sometime during the week.

Due to the strong opposition to the consolidation form bill and to the zeal which the advocates of the Small Council Bill are displaying, there is a disposition among the members of the House to report out the Wildman measure for a commission to study conditions in third class cities and to make a report to the next Legislature. With Connellsville taking on the third class city form of government the first of the year and the holding of a municipal election this fall for the election of city officials and councilmen, it is believed that if the third class city form of government is not changed at all, it should be changed at this session so that Connellsville would not be at any unnecessary confusion in adopting the present form of government and then having to change in two years from now.

STATE WILL AIDAppropriation for Braddock Park, Along the Pike, is Assured.

HARRISBURG, April 21.—That the General Braddock Memorial Park Association of Fayette county will receive an appropriation of $10,000 from the State is assured. The measure introduced in the Senate by Senator William E. Crow of Fayette has been reported out of the Senate appropriations committee with an affirmative recommendation and comes up for first reading in the Senate tonight.

It will pass second reading tomorrow morning and third reading and final passage Wednesday. It will go to the House immediately.

The Crow bill provides that the State shall appropriate $10,000 to the General Braddock Memorial Park, a tract of land of approximately 24 acres, nine miles east of Uniontown, surrounding the spot where General Braddock, of French and Indian war fame, is buried.

SUCCEEDS MORGANThomas Murray Elected Director of the Steel Corporation.

NEW YORK, April 21.—The directors of the United States Steel Corporation met this morning and elected Thomas Murray, assistant secretary of the corporation, as director in the place of the late J. P. Morgan, Sr.

The following directors were re-elected: E. H. Gary, George W. Perkins, Henry Phipps, Alfred Clifford, S. C. Converse, James A. Farrell and J. P. Morgan, Jr.

In the list of stockholders it was shown that Morgan & Co. held 2,500 shares of preferred stock and 3,200 shares of common. J. P. Morgan's holdings amount to 500 shares of the preferred and 5,000 shares of the common.

"LOST" BOY HAD FUN.Makes Himself at Home in Camp and Gets Big Hunt of Fish.

SMITHFIELD, April 21.—Garland Hahn and William Burchinal were among the first to go trout fishing from this section. In the mountains near Mill Run they became separated and Hahn, who was hunting for a trout, was lost. He was found by the Burchinal boy.

G. S. Burchinal, father of the boy, went after him Saturday. The lad was found in an old camp, very much at home and proud possessor of 30 and trout which he had put out after a fruitless search for the Burchinal boy.

Burgess Quits the Job.
SOMERSET, April 21.—Frank M. Forney, associate editor of the Somerset Standard, has resigned as Burgess of Somerset, resigning as the reason that court decisions conflict as to whether his term of office has already expired. He was elected in 1909 and it was supposed that the constitutional amendments extended his term and so.

THREATS OF FLINN
AMUSE THE SOLONS;
EFFECT FALLS FLAT*Bull Mooser's Visit to Harrisburg Fails to Worry Legislators.*WILL IGNORE CONTRACTOR-BOSS*Legislature is Controlled by Regulars and Progressive Measures are Being Enacted Without the Aid or Consent of Washington Party "Reformers."

United Press Telegram.
HARRISBURG, April 21.—If there lurked in any remote corner of Pennsylvania the slightest doubt that the Washington party and all its bosses and workers are a political false alarm, the visit to this city of Bull Mooser, president of the Pittsburgh contractor-millionaire advertised to the entire State the fact, known here since the beginning of the present session of the Legislature, that in spite of all their pretensions, which are somewhat lofty and at other times just plainly ridiculous, the so-called independent Republican element lacks the cohesiveness and force to influence legislation in any direction, backward or forward, up or down.

Flinn came breathing threats, but, as a matter of fact, the only people who took any real interest in him or the purpose of his visit was some of his immediate and very small personal following. Just what the ultimate program of Flinn will be it is impossible to say at this time, but it is safe to predict that nothing of any importance will do in any way effect the course of events at this capital. The leaders will go right on with their plans, just as if Flinn did not exist. They will not hurry any more than they intended to a month ago, and they will not turn aside to give in all over and the campaign of misrepresentation which has been organized by the Flinn people comes to an end, the people will realize that this session is remarkable both for the progressive character of the laws passed and for the certainty with which the branches of the General Assembly worked. And they will also realize that the Washington party, as a party, had no part in the result attained.

Naturally the people close to Flinn find it hard to understand why his spectacular interference with his sagacious cause more of a sorry and ineffective. Almost any clerk-room attendant or lobby frequenter could tell them, but instead of seeking information in a practical way they persist in depending for information upon their paid agitators, journalists and others, and these worthies are vitally interested in making every one believe Flinn is "it" and the Bull Moose organization is as strong as it ever was. Results such as were obtained in the Michigan elections the other day show the Progressives dropped into the hands of the leadership of the elections of last November make the task of these agitators particularly hard, but they probably are within the letter of truth when they claim their party is as strong now as ever. The show-down which attended the election of the Legislature proved that it never did amount to anything in a practical way.

The true situation here is this: Although this Legislature is absolutely in control of the organization Republican element, it is in no way progressive body. There is absolutely no difference of opinion among the leaders of the three parties on any of the measures introduced to correct social and economic ills and there is an excellent prospect now that all of them will go through and receive the Governor's signature. From the Child Labor and Women's Labor Bills and the Public Utilities Bill against which the corporations are making most energetic fights are scheduled to pass the Senate, which body some of the ultra-progressive people in the past have always doubted that it would pass. A measure of this character that have passed one or both houses already and are destined eventually to become part of the law of the State would be long. It will include the Walnut bills, already mentioned, tax reform bills, a comprehensive code of election, reform bills, the great central valley and the Rocky Mountain region and the plains states, will open the coming week, the weather bureau announces in its weekly forecast.

But on measures in which the political interest is paramount the situation is distinctly different. Here the Organization Republicans are offering sweeping reforms but the Washington party people are not satisfied. They say anything less than they demand constitutes a betrayal of faith—and what they demand would have for its first and most important effect the turning over to them of the control of everything. Nothing less than all the State patronage; control of the State government; absolute dominance in the party organization and perhaps a United States Senatorship or two will satisfy them. In all the circumstances it is not to be wondered at that the Organization Republicans refuse to back the reform bills and refuse to let Bill Flinn and his friends may run things. Nor is it strange that the organization has decided to stand on its record and refuse to show flight over Flinn's groundless threats. It is realized here that when the voters set the real facts Flinn and his various well-financed leagues and bureaus will not be able to do much. Money cuts a great swath in politics sometimes, but it is not everything.

ROME, April 21.—For the first time since the Pope's relapse, the papal physicians today did not give out a bulletin concerning his condition. It was learned, however, that he was steadily growing better, and that his condition has improved to such an extent that immediate fears for his safety have passed away.

HATFIELD TO ADDRESS MINERS IN CONVENTION AT CHARLESTON*Governor Will Make Plain Remarks Regarding Strike Situation, Reflecting on Both Sides.

United Press Telegram.
CHARLESTON, April 21.—When the miners meet in convention here tomorrow to consider terms of settling the strike that has caused considerable bloodshed during the last two years in the Eight and Cabell creek regions, Governor Hatfield is expected to make a few plain remarks in regard to the situation that will reflect on both the miners and operators. The governor says he has information in his possession that does not cast credit on either side.

Delegates to the convention began arriving in the city this morning. Although no time is set for the convention, it is believed that the meeting will not be called to order until the afternoon.

The operators have already started granting concessions to the men. Notices providing for a nine-hour day have been posted at many of the workings, and in several instances increase in wages have been granted.

BANDITS GUILLOTINEDNoted Robbers, Who Terrorized Paris, Lost Heads.

PARIS, April 21.—Sandy, Galesman and Monier, the three Bonot auto bandits were guillotined this morning. On account of popular clamor against the executions, the time for the guillotining of the men was changed from Tuesday to today. Only a small gathering witnessed the deaths.

Sandy, the 21-year-old youth who was the youngest of the three, was the coolest of the three. Galesman was also cool. He refused to make a statement. Monier was visibly affected, trembling slightly as he was led to the guillotine.

Many residents of the city today predicted that Paris has seen the last execution by guillotine. Popular sentiment is against this form of execution.

FOR THE SALVATION
ARMY IS PROGRAM*Workers Seek to Raise Big Fund for a Building Here.*A MEMORIAL TO MRS. BAMFORD*Louisville Man is Detailed to Conduct Campaign in Behalf of the Organization at This Place; Ministers Will be Asked to Give Their Aid.

Workers of the Salvation Army have launched a campaign to raise a fund of $20,000 for the erection of a barracks here as a memorial to Mrs. Sarah J. Bamford, wife of Captain John J. Bamford, who died three weeks ago, following a long service in this community. The project will be launched this afternoon at a meeting of the Connellsville Ministerial Association.

The plan to erect the barracks at this time is the result of a meeting of workers in Columbus, soon after the floods. The meeting was informal, and followed a luncheon at which Miss Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in America, and W. L. Powell, former secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Louisville, Ky., were present. The conversation turned to the work being done in Connellsville, and Commander Booth was touched by the news of the death of Mrs. Bamford. She was well known to the commander, and Miss Booth decided that something should be done in Connellsville immediately to make permanent her work.

Roll is raising funds for the erection of barracks and was sent here to start the campaign. Mr. Powell will be assisted by Adjutant Harry H. Byrnes.

It is planned to erect a large brick structure, centrally located, which will be used as a clearing house for charity work. Business men, ministers and borough officials having charitable cases called to their attention will refer them to the army barracks, where they will be looked after.

The campaign of raising the fund will be in the hands of a committee. Mr. Rowell aims to have 75 business men take charge of the campaign, appointing a chairman from among their number to direct the work. With a committee of this size devoting its efforts to the benefit of the project, it is expected that success will be attained.

YOUTH BOASTS OF MURDERS.Smiles as He Tells of Killing Woman and Children.

ELGIN, Ill., April 21.—Criminologists this morning studied with interest the case of 11-year-old Herman Copus, who calmly told of slaying Mrs. Maude Sleep and her two little children. The youth was unable to give any motive for the murders, but smilingly told his tale as though he had not done anything wrong.

He said that he returned from school on the night of the murders, and as he entered the house, Mrs. Sleep asked him if he would have anything to eat. He didn't answer, he says. Instead, he shot the woman and her two children. Then he shot the children and dragged their bodies to the well where he threw them.

EXECUTIVE ABILITY COUNTS.President Decides a Scientist May Need Other Qualifications.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Just because a man is a scientist, he will not be given a position by the Wilson administration. He must have executive ability. This statement was made this morning by the President, when he was asked at the weekly conference with newspaper men whether a scientist will be given special examinations for open positions.

The case at point was referred particularly to the Willis L. Moore episode. The President refused to discuss the sudden dismissal of the weather forecaster, but declared that his successor would be chosen for his executive ability.

ENGAGED TO DUKE.Miss Nancy Leishman Will Wed Nobleman, Paper States.

BERLIN, April 21.—A local news agency has announced that it was in a position to confirm the report of the engagement of Miss Nancy Leishman, daughter of Ambassador Leishman, to the Duke of Croyl.

The engagement was rumored several weeks ago, but as neither of the young people confirmed it and as a coolness was said to have sprung up between the Duke and the Leishman family after it was rumored that Miss Leishman, like of the Duke's cousin, the Leishman family is from Pittsburgh.

Wilson Makes Appointments.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—President Wilson this morning announced the following appointments: James L. Batty, auditor of the War Department; J. S. A. Strong, governor of Alaska; Charles Davidson, surveyor of Alaska; George S. Willis, Walter Worthington and William Little, captains in the navy.

CONNELLVILLE GIRLS ON A LEPER ISLAND AT HAWAII*Colonies is a Garden of Eden Where Cured Patients Ask to Remain Permanently.

Two Connellsville girls are on the leper island of Molokai, in the Hawaiian group, which is described as a veritable Garden of Eden, in which cured patients ask to stay. They are Mrs. George W. McCoy and Miss Emma Miller, daughters of H. W. Miller of the South Side.

Dr. McCoy is the surgeon in charge of the colony. Those stationed on the island live on one side while the laboratory, hospital and quarters for the lepers is on the other.

According to Dr. McCoy's report to Washington, the settlement is in splendid condition. The inmates do not toll, nor is there a guard about them. Requests from cured patients that they be permitted to remain is frequent, he declares.

Progress in the eradication of the disease is being retarded by politics, Dr. McCoy complains. He urges periodic examination of every inhabitant on the Hawaiian Islands, but opposition has developed because it would be necessary to levy an increased tax.

BIG CONTRACT LETWork Will be Started on E. & O.'s $5,000,000 Project.

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad awarded contracts Saturday for construction of 11 miles of additional double track between Orleans Road and Little Cacapon, on the east end of the Cumberland division. The improvement will cost approximately $5,000,000, and owing to the heavy character of the construction, the work will be extended over a period of about two years.

The new line will be known as the Magnolia cut-off and will be a low grade line, which will greatly facilitate the movement of the enormous volume of freight handled over this section of the system and which is increasing steadily.

On completion of the contract just let the Baltimore & Ohio will be equipped as a three-track and four-track system, part of Cumberland to Martinsburg, and in connection with the extensive track additions on the mountain divisions during the last three years there will be ample facilities to care for the growing traffic.

The work will be done under the supervision of Francis Lee Stuntz, chief engineer, and activities will be commenced within a short time, or as soon as the contractors can assemble the necessary machinery and material.

BOYS STEAL BICYCLESYoungsters Take Machines and are Landed in Lockup.

Charged with the theft of three bicycles, warrants were sworn out before Squire Lawrence Donagan against Paul Cunningham, Joseph May, Edward Crossland, James Davidson and Richard Cole, youngsters ranging in years from 12 to 15. Four of the boys have been arrested and are now held at city hall awaiting arraignment of the case.

They admit participating in the theft, and acknowledge dismantling the wheels in an effort to change their appearance so that they would be unrecognizable. The bicycles were the property of W. F. Solason, W. F. Chorpensing and Sherman Huey.

LOOKS EASY—BUT ISN'TMissing Word Artist Asserts That It Has a Real Puzzle.

The missing word artist reports that he has a puzzle this week. It looks easy, he says, but it isn't. It will take careful reading of every advertisement on the page to locate the elusive word which has been slipped from its proper place. The only hint the gentleman gives is that the word begins with "Y" and ends with "U."

The word last week was "coupon," omitted from the Surplus Department Store's advertisement. It was taken out from between "this" and "entire."

Look for the word beginning with "Y" and ending with "U" and there you are—if you find it.

FORFEITS FROM 24*First Roundup Not Enough for Players at Main Street Club.*LOSER CAUSES A SECOND VISIT*Proprietor Contributes $95 to Borough Treasury as Favor to Prisoners Who Were Caught Short of Change; Have Evidence Now, the Police Declare.

The Union Social Club, on East Main street, was raided early yesterday morning by the police. Officers visited the place twice within three hours, making 20 arrests on the first occasion and four the second. Chief Hertz collected forfeits from four of the eight who escaped from a window, and will serve warrants on four others today.

It was shortly after 2 o'clock when the chief and Patrolmen Stump, McDonald and Lemon surrounded the large three-story building, where the club is said to have been conducting a gambling house and speakeasy. Lemon and Stump were stationed at the rear of the building and the chief and McDonald endeavored to gain entrance through the front. This they had difficulty in doing. The door was fastened with a spring lock and there was no other available means of ingress. A short wait in the darkness of the vestibule, however, rewarded their vigilance. An inmate on his way home descended the stairs and opened the door. The chief shoved his foot through the aperture, and before the man was able to give warning, he was under arrest.

Ascending the stairs the officers entered a room where, they say, a full-fledged barroom was doing a rushing business. Whiskey and beer bottles were scattered about the bar and shelves, and in the center of the room several men were gathered about a small table playing poker. Appearance of the cops put a stop to the game.

After notifying the gathering they were under arrest, Chief Hertz made his way to the floor above. Standing in the hallway, he says, he saw a party of eight men gathered about a small table playing poker. Seeing the need of assistance, he went to the rear and admitted Lemon and Stump. When he returned the birds in the poker room had flown. An open window above a front porch told the story of the flight.

The night was a big occasion, apparently, for the club. In the kitchen the chief found two cooks busily engaged in preparing a tempting repast. He escorted them to the barroom, where the patrolmen had lined up the other inmates, and forfeits were collected. Those unable to pay a forfeit table playing poker. Question of Succession Is Worrying Russian Empire

Photos by American Press Association.

Three Recent Photographs of the Czarovitch.

He has the extreme nervous activity often seen in children who are not destined to live long. So runs the recent statement about the Grand Duke Alexis, only son of Emperor Nicholas II, of Russia. It is a statement from

The institution of the duma and ministerial government in Russia has not lessened the potential personal might of the czar. He is still "emperor and autocrat of all the Russias," czar of Moscow, Kiev, Vladimir, Novgorod, Kazan, Astrakhan, of Poland, of Siberia and of a score of other lands, besides lord and sovereign of a hundred cities. It takes eleven lines of close small print in the Almanach de Gotha to tell of his life and even then they wind up with the significant "etc."

The Grand Duke Alexis was born July 30, 1904, in the palace of Peterhof. He is the fifth child and the only son of the Emperor Nicholas and the Empress Alexandra. The latter before her marriage in 1904 was the Princess Alix of Hesse, granddaughter of Queen Victoria of Great Britain. The birth of the czarvitch was made the occasion of wonderful rejoicings throughout Russia.

From all accounts of persons who have been permitted to see the Russian royalties at close range the young prince is a spoiled, but very bright youngster. He has been permitted to lord it over his older sisters and has not proved amenable to correction even by his parents. Of course discipline by governess or tutor of the heir to the second greatest throne on earth has been out of the question. But in extenuation of the misbehavior of the czarvitch many amusing stories of his brightness and quickness of wit are told. For example, it is said that a recent meeting of the emperor with some of his counselors was interrupted by the intrusion of the youngster, who burst into the room to tell his father that his sister Tasia (Anastasia) had walked home. Being reproved by the emperor for interrupting a grave matter of business, the boy left the room, to return in a few minutes wearing the uniform of a general in the Russian army. Giving his father a military salute, he bowed and departed with quick step. "Sir, I have the honor to report that her Imperial highness the Grand Duchess Anastasia has had the boldness to strike a general in your majesty's army. And with that he marched bravely out."

Next in order of succession to the Grand Duke Alexis comes the only brother of Nicholas II, the Grand Duke Michael. But Michael recently resigned his right to the throne. He has joined the growing ranks of the royalties who prefer love to the burdens of the throne. He is married morganatically—that is, his marriage is recognized by the church, but not by the state. A lady of noble rank. The recent birth of a son induced him to seek retirement on his country estates. He has never had much taste for the life at court and virtually given up all his privileges.

After the Grand Duke Michael in the line of succession come the three sons of the late Grand Duke Vladimir, brother of the assassinated Emperor Nicholas. They are in order of age, Cyril, Boris and Andrew. None of them is popular in Russia.

Tama Jim Has Bidden Us a Long Anticipatory Farewell, In Print

TAMA JIM has sung his swan song, or moved his last moo, or uttered his last bellow, or clucked his last cluck, or has emitted whatever variety of farmyard noise you choose to call it. He has delivered his valedictory, he has bid official life his anticipatory farewell. It's no MUO well, it must be going sort of farewell either. It's a big, man sized goodbye, with all the facts and the trimmings. It takes hundreds of pages of type to convey the secretary of agriculture's sadness over leaving the job he has held for sixteen years. Talk about Washington's farewell address! That's a brief note compared to the final report of the secretary of agriculture, who will leave his department next March.

Of course no criticism of Tama Jim is intended in this comment on his farewell, which has taken the shape of his annual report. When a man is about to leave a place in the cabinet after having been a member of the president's official family for a longer time than any other man in the history of the United States he is entitled to spread himself on the record, so to speak. He has a clear right to tell his $2,000,000 or more countrymen how much his department has advanced since he took hold of it.

The country has advanced some, too, in that time, so it may be a question whether or not the department of agriculture has advanced with quick step. But Uncle Jim brings forth a fine array of facts and figures to show the progress made by his department since he took charge way back at the beginning of McKinley's administration, in 1897. Yes, McKinley appointed him and Roosevelt kept him and Taft found that the farmers of the United States wanted him retained, so Wilson stayed in the cabinet.

Here is what Mr. Wilson says of the progress of his department since he became its secretary: "The record of sixteen years has been written. It begins with a yearly farm production of $4,000,000,000 and ends with $10,000,000,000. Sixteen years ago the farmer was a joke of the caricaturist, now he is like the stone that was rejected by the builder and has become the headstone of the corner. The tillage of the soil was burdened with drudgery, but prosperity followed and grew with unexampled speed. Beginnings have been made in a production per acre increasing faster than the natural increase of population. There has been an uplift of agriculture and of country life. "In the last sixteen years the farmer has increased steadily the wealth production year by year, with the exception of 1911. In the sixteen years the farmers' wealth production increased 141 per cent.

Most productive of all agricultural years in this country has been 1912. The earth has produced its greatest annual dividend. The sun and the rain and the fertility of the soil heeded not the human controversies, but kept on working in co-operation with the farmers' efforts to utilize them. The prices at the farm are generally profitable and will continue the prosperity that farmers have enjoyed in recent years. The total production of farm ment to help the farmers. The nation forgot its farmers in the general scheme of education of past years, and few philanthropists thought of them when giving for education, but they are waking up and thinking for themselves, and congress has been good to them."

From 2,444 employees in 1897 and an appropriation of $3,272,902 the agricultural department had increased to 12,328 employees at the beginning of the present fiscal year, with an appropriation this year of almost $25,000,000. There now are 52,000 requests every week for department publications wealth is the highest yet reached by half a billion dollars. The grand total for 1912 is estimated to be $9,532,000,000. This is more than twice the value of the farm wealth in 1893.

"More than $105,000,000,000 is the grand total of farm wealth production in the last sixteen years—an amount equal to about three quarters of the present national wealth.

whereas there were only 500 in 1897. In sixteen years 225,000,000 copies have been distributed. In soil investigation an area of 623,000 square miles, equal to that of Germany, France, Great Britain, Ireland and Italy, has been covered.

Before he started in to become a secretary permanent fixture of the agricultural department Mr. Wilson was professor of agriculture in the Iowa State Agricultural college and director of the state agricultural experiment station. He had been a member of the national house of representatives and of the state assembly and had served also as member of the Iowa state railway commission. He was born in Appleton, Scotland, on Aug. 16, 1856, and came to the United States when he was sixteen, settling with his parents in Connecticut. In 1885 he moved to Iowa and has resided in the state ever since. Besides being one of the country's best trained scientific agriculturists Mr. Wilson has followed the plow himself.

THE SOISSON.

PAUL J. RAINEY'S PICTURES. In the Paul J. Rainey African Hunt Pictures, which come to the Soisson Friday and Saturday, April 25 and 26.

Paul J. Rainey, in showing one of the most marvelous motion pictures ever taken. It reveals the treading and killing of an African cheetah by a pack of trained hunting dogs.

At different times motion picture manufacturers have endeavored to represent wild animal hunts by using blooded down circus animals, but the pictures have always been obviously manufactured, and have given no more idea of a big game hunt than a lithograph poster on a wall.

The pictures shown as a portion of the Paul J. Rainey African Hunt, however, is so obviously the real thing, that no one ever thinks of questioning it. In the first place, the background of a jungle peculiar only to Africa, is shown, and then the complete hunt is shown on the screen, beginning with the preparations in the camp, for the expedition. The men start out horseback. The dogs are kept up about a mile, but it is soon evident that they have found the spear or scent, and then they follow it so rapidly, that it was only with extreme difficulty that the motion picture operator mounted on horseback, and they surround the tree.

Finally the leopard or cheetah, as he is called in Africa, is shown in the top branches of a high tree. He at first seems determined to await his prey there, but his courage fails at the last, and he leaves the tree, and runs for about half a mile until he is again compelled to take refuge in an acacia tree. This time the dogs are so close the leopard cannot escape, and they surround the tree.

Then the most wonderful portion of the picture is shown, and at the same time a remarkable example of the courage of the dogs. Two plucky little Alderle terriers, after making repeated attempts finally succeed in reaching the lower branches of the tree by jumping. From there they climb with the agility of monkeys to the top, where the leopard is crouching waiting for them. Although less than a fourth the leopard's weight and strength, they attack him so fiercely, that after a brief fight he leaps to the ground, where the other dogs in the pack pounce upon him, and the fight is soon over. All of this is shown graphically on the screen, and often excites the audience to such a point that they rise in their seats and cheer. Mr. Rainey is the only big game hunter to prove that the lion and leopard can be hunted successfully with dogs, and it is probable that from now on all invaders of the big game country in British East Africa will carry along packs of hunting dogs with them.

THE ARCADE.

GOOD VAUDEVILLE BILL. The Arcade is presenting a varied vaudeville bill this week. The Davis Imperial Trio head the bill for the first of the week, in a College Scamp. This is a laughable comedy, so full of life and vim that it is a sure no. High Jinks introduces some thing new in the jumping line. With the paraphernalia of the national game, baseball, he does some mirthy clever stunts. Siber and North, with a sketch entitled, "The Bushy Man," a comedy singing and talking act, will please all. Bert and Malverne, will at once make a hit with the audience with their clever singing and dancing. Then a comedy song and will get them much applause. Licensed motion pictures will close the bill with a two reel feature.

A Story of the Moment

By WALT MASON

(The Famous Prose Poet)

The Helpful Kicker

THESE that the newspaper devotes... a column to a story of the kick-...
ers, remarked two bald boarders...
of their space to those of the kickers.
But the good work goes on, say I.
This would be far better than if about fifty of its kickers were laid to rest in the cold, moist graveyard.
And this town would be a better place star boarder, "is more kickers. The same thing may be said of the country and the world at large. Kickers are the salt of the earth, Mr. Jiggers, and it seems a pity that they are so misunderstood and misapprehended. The press and the public unite to praise the goats and to condemn the kickers. The former represents a cruel misapprehension, and the latter represents all that is wise and conservatively.

The people are chumps, all the world over. The people are chumps, all the world over. The people are chumps, nowadays, the fact remains that they are chumps. They are given to decision of all kinds. They chase but-flies and hunt rainbows, and the only mistake upon them is the same overall of the kickers, who stand upon the market-place and before the symposium, uttered in unadvised kickers, and knocking everything. I remember when this town had its boom a number of condemned men upon the people. The highly praised by campaign speakers, and harboring all the same about this, were as howling lunatics. They had the idea that the burg was going to become a world's metropolis in three months. They took their money out of the savings banks and invested it in lots and millions of dollars. They bought stock in all sorts of crazy building and improvement schemes.
In this country and the result is that the prevailing enthusiasm infected in, the scheme of the kickers, and instead of money to establish a shooting gallery, but one of my friends had lost his money. I remember when I talked me out of my madness.

He said that the bottom would fall out of the burg in a month or two,
and then everybody would be dead and he went away kicking, and then everybody would be dead and he went away kicking. Other yet to be recognized, and all unfortunates and free schools will be abolished.
The same way of the kickers will come audience, and the public feeling was so strong against them that there was a talk of tar and feathers and of drumming.

Colonel TODHUNTER of Missouri

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"Howdy, Colonel Strickland!" she said, her voice trembling a little. "You are on your way to visit Tom, aren't you?"

"Yes, Miss Mary," replied Tom's father quietly. "The trial begins tomorrow, and I only left him to meet Colonel Todhunter, and he's returning with me."

"Colonel Strickland," said Mary resolutely, though her voice shook more than ever, "I want you to carry a message to Tom from me."

There was a curious little pause. Mrs. Todhunter laid her hand gently on her daughter's arm, but the girl moved away from the touch, not harshly, yet as if she felt it to be a protest.

"I want you to give Tom my love, Colonel Strickland," she said. "And I want you to tell him, from me, that I don't believe one word of those awful charges against him—not one word—either about Sam Tucker or about that girl!"

And as she spoke Mary Todhunter burst out crying. She dabbed pitifully at her face with her handkerchief, unable to control her emotions. Then, sobbing, she turned away with her mother, no other word being spoken.

"God bless that girl of yours, Thurst!" spoke Colonel Strickland, his own voice unsteady. "She's good girl clear through—and, somehow, she gives me more courage than I've had for many a day. They haven't got Tom yet—and they'll have the fight of their lives before they do get him!"

"That's the talk!" cried Colonel Todhunter. "Face him that way, Bill, and we'll make 'em spin their souls for every inch they try to gain! They got to do it—by the good God up yonder in them skies. Bill, they got to do it!"

But the little flicker of encouragement caused by a girl's brave words soon died away in the shadow of Tom Strickland's prison. It was two very weary and gray faced old men who came away from the prisoner an hour later and peered at the jail's front, each to go to his own home.

That evening Colonel Todhunter went by appointment to the Strickland home for a conference with Tom's father and Major Gentry Dryden, leading counsel for the defense. It was nearly midnight when he returned to his own home.

He found Aunt Miranda Ramsey there. The old woman rose, trembling, at sight of him, her black hands trembling toward him in instinctive gladness of welcome.

"Bless Gawd, yo' done come!" she cried. "I been waitin' my ole heart out waitin' fo' yo', ahh! Kinn! Todhunter, yo' got some mighty quick an' ticklish wit' cut out fo' yo' ef yo' gwine save Mac's Tom Strickland's life—dese huncome I hyar now to tell yo' about it, suh!"

Through the after mid night blackness that was soon to change into the gray of a cloud swept down a fugitive man and woman fled.

Side by side they sat in a light road wagon drawn by a rambored horse whose long and swift stride told of its selection for this special service.

The man, stout, swarthy, with keen black eyes that gleamed alertly from under the wide rim of a weather beaten sombrero, seemed ill content, however, with the progress being made.

Almost incessantly he urged the horse to increased effort, now and then cursing outright in the grip of a feverish impatience.

Save when he leaned forward for this urging the man sat slouching and limp, the mark of the vagrant lurching on every line of body and limb.

The woman was tense, rigid, her face set always to the front. It was framed in by a shawl thrown over her head and drawn about her shoulders. Once or twice her glance went furtively to the map beside her. Fear and distrust were in her eyes. Her hands were tightly clasped together as they lay in her lap.

Deep woods stretched on either side of the road. Their stillness was profound. The enveloping gloom seemed as if of the grave itself. The woman shuddered and drew her shawl closer.

"Lord, he's murcy!" she spoke. "I can't do it, Jeeves—I can't! It's worse'n murder—worse'n what's been done already!"

The man laid a cruel lash across his horse's flanks. "You fool!" he muttered. "It's high time I bring you away! You lovesick fool!"

The girl's eyes flashed angrily. "That won't be a lie!" she retorted. "Ain't I told you? And would I be a-doin' that if I was lovesick for somebody else? It's a lie, and you know it!"

The man laughed. "If you had stayed where you was you'd h' blabbed the whole thing out and you'd be in jail now 'stead of him."

Suddenly the woman threw her arms upward. "It'll last me to my dyin' day!" she cried. "I ought to h' told the truth! I wish I had! I wish I had! It couldn't be no worse'n it is now!"

"I say that it could!" savagely returned the man. "You keep your mouth shut. I got all I can do to save us as it is, 'thout'n you waggin' your tongue. You keep your mouth shut!"

The woman passed her hands over her face miserably.

The man again slouched down in his seat. Now and then his moody glance turned apprehensively to his companion.

"I've done a whole lot for your sake, Lottie-May," he spoke at last. "I told you to get away long ago. I'm takin' big chances on your account. And you don't seem to care."

Lottie-May Doggett's face grew ashen. "Yes, I do, Jeeves," she exclaimed. "I know just what you're doin' for me. The only thing I got to do is to go with you. And you mustn't think I don't appreciate it!" Her hands fluttered pitifully at her throat.

"My God!" she cried, her voice breaking in anguish. "Tom Strickland's goin' to be hung! He's goin' to be hung! They ain't nothin' on earth can save him!"

Far in the east the gray dawn was breaking.

"D—n Tom Strickland!" cursed the man. "I'll be glad when he is hung! You've always been in love with him!"

"He's goin' to be hung!" repeated the girl. "And they ain't no way to save him now!"

An evil mockery leaped into the man's face. "Oh, yes, there's a way," he retorted. "You go back there to that trial and confess the truth. You're the only one on God's earth that can save him. Ain't that so?"

The girl's face whitened. As the man spoke they had turned from the pine road and were going deeper into the woods. A scant light of day had come. The faces of the two were haggard and worn.

"Yes, I'm the only one!" cried Lottie-May Doggett suddenly. "And that's what I'd do now if I had the chance—tell the whole truth. I ain't thinkin' no more about me. I ain't thinkin' no more about you. I'm thinkin' about Tom Strickland!"

Tom's form and dilapidated cabin was revealed in a barren little opening ahead. The man laughed aloud as he saw it.

"You'll have to take it out in thimble!" she cried. "You're exclaimin' triumphantly. 'I've got you now where you are safe. When you and me leave that shack tonight there'll be no more talk of you savin' Tom Strickland. We'll be hanged straight for Oklahoma then, and nothin' can stop us!"

The girl's eyes rested on the miserable little cabin. An ominous light was in them. The man drew up at the hut and assisted his companion from the wagon. He pushed open a creaking door. The cabin's interior showed black and forbidding.

"That's where we stay till night time," he said. "I'll take the horse and wagon round where they won't be seen if anybody happens to come along. And I don't want no more of your foolishness, Lottie-May!"

The girl started as if struck. "Don't talk to me like that!" she cried. "I ain't your nigger yet. I ain't got to do anything I don't feel like doin'. You're takin' too much for granted, Jeeves!"

The man seemed to lose all patience at this. Grasping the girl by the shoulders he forced her into the hut. Then he disappeared. A moment later he returned.

The girl was standing against the wall. Her face was buried in her arms. Sobs shook her body. The man closed the door behind him.

CHAPTER XIII.

Capture and Trial.

FIVE miles back, on the road along which the fugitives had come, two men on horseback were galloping swiftly in pursuit. One was tall, with cool gray blue eyes under shaggy brows, gray hair, white mustache and an old fashioned military air. His seat in the saddle was that of a seasoned cavalier. The other was small, wiry, with a smooth shaven, hardest face, a mouth like a steel trap, cold hazel eyes that kept themselves fixed on the road ahead.

"We oughtn't to be very far behind 'em now, Jim," spoke the first man. "Th' ain't no way they could h' dodged from the main road, is there?"

"No, colonel, they ain't," returned the other. "Not till they come to the old dirt road that leads to the cabin I told you about. That's where they're headin' for, Colonel Todhunter, and it's where we're goin' to run 'em. We'll be there pretty soon too!"

Colonel Todhunter's face was grim. "I hate to think of Lottie-May Doggett!" he spoke. "It's mighty bad, mighty bad, sub. I feel that sorry for poor old Rafe Doggett. Lord, the shame of it all is a-goin' to kill that good old man!"

The wiry little man to whom he spoke snapped his jaws together in angry scorn.

"That can't be helped now, colonel," he made answer. "I got to do my duty, woman or no woman!"

"I ain't askin' you to do anything less'n your duty, Jim," replied Colonel Todhunter. "And I'm just as responsible as you are. But I'm sorry, and I'm afraid too. If there's any serious trouble I hope there'll be some way o' seemin' that the girl don't get hurt."

"She won't if she behaves herself," said the other. "But she's got to do that, for there ain't gold to be no time for foolishness. You've got to forget the girl part of this business if you want to come out on top, Colonel Todhunter."

Colonel Todhunter sighed. "I reckon that's the straight, Jim," he agreed. "The two rode on abreast without further words until they reached the crossroad."

"Here we are, colonel," spoke the little man, his voice low. "It's a safe bet they're layin' up till dark in that old shack."

The two riders checked their horses to a walk.

Suddenly a woman's shriek broke the stillness. "For God's sake, Jeeves!" she cried. "You ain't a-goin' to kill me like a dog, are you?"

Instantly, hearing the cry, Colonel Todhunter pressed his horse to a full gallop. His companion did the same. They threw themselves from the saddle in front of the cabin. Colonel Todhunter buried his weight against the door. It yielded, and he plunged inside.

A girl knelt in the center of the dark little hut. Her hands were uplifted in entreaty. Over her stood a man with a knife raised to strike. His face was black with rage.

Colonel Todhunter covered him with a swiftly drawn pistol. "Hands up, Chickasaw!" he yelled to Lottie-May. "You ain't a-goin' to kill me like a dog, are you?"

The man turned. He looked into the quizzical eyes of two revolvers, the sheriff being well high as quick to draw as Colonel Todhunter. Their menace did not invite resistance. The man saw this truth instantly. Colonel Todhunter's steady eyes held his. The colonel spoke to the girl without looking at her.

"Get off there to one side, Lottie-May," he said. "Quick!"

The girl sprang from under the knife. "Thank God, you come, Colonel Todhunter!" she cried. "Thank God—oh, thank God!"

At the girl's cry the man laughed aloud. He threw his knife to the floor. Then, empty handed, he stood confronting his captors.

The trial of Tom Strickland had been relentlessly hurried to the day of its closing by a political prosecution working through a complaisant judge servile to machine influence.

From that early moment of the selection of a jury the truth of a merciless haste was in evidence. It was explained by the court that there was imperative need for as little delay as might be possible, the docket being crowded and many cases remaining to be disposed of during the present term. The aid a fact was that Colonel Strickland's campies felt sure of a conviction and were determined that the verdict should be rendered in time to remove whatever peril of his nomination might still remain.

The evidence scored heavily against Tom Strickland and Yancy factions at the opening rally of the Strickland campaign. The witness stated that the accused at that time made threats, "got even" with Tucker for attempting to break up the Strickland meeting. On the following day the accused had openly insulted Tucker in the bar-room of the Niagara hotel and had

There was plainly sounded a note of somewhat insolent confidence, almost like jubilation, in the swift announcement of the state's readiness for trial. Colonel Bill Strickland, gray and pinched of face, recognized its instant menace. His closely shut lips broke their rigid lines pitifully, precisely as they had done when Tom was brought into court and took his seat confronting the jury.

At the same moment a swift flash of unanticipated triumph leaped into the eyes of old Ephraim Tucker, sitting with the state's counsel. Tom's father saw this, and his jaws set hard at the sight.

"They're feeling pretty sure of a conviction," he whispered to Major Gentry Dryden. "Is it likely they've obtained evidence against Tom that we don't know anything about?"

The lawyer shook his head. "I hardly think so," he replied. "We've got a line on all their witnesses, I believe. I can't figure out how they'll be able to spring a surprise on us."

But one sinister sentence in the prosecuting attorney's opening statement to the jury undeceived him.

"We shall prove, gentlemen, beyond a reasonable doubt," the state's counsel said, "the motive which we claim, led Thomas W. Strickland to slay Stamford Tucker, and then—moving a step nearer to the jury and lifting one hand impressively—'having proved this, we shall establish by the testimony of an eyewitness the fact of Thomas W. Strickland's presence at the scene of the murder at the time of its commission.'"

Major Gentry Dryden, in spite of himself, started at hearing this crushing announcement. Something of fierce resentment, perhaps in his impatience, showed in Colonel Strickland's grizzled countenance. Tom's face, a helpless perplexity in his eyes, went deadly white.

The atmosphere became tense with the sudden dramatic grip of the situation thus created.

And the hearing of testimony for the state began.

It went forward with merciless precision and dispatch, a certainty and rapidity so well ordered as to be overwhelming in moral effect.

The evidence was clearly against Tom Strickland. Two witnesses, a farmer and his son, testified to finding the dead body of Sam Tucker by the roadside, at a point midway between the Tucker home and the town of Nineveh, at daybreak on the morning of the 27th day of July just past. They were on their way into town to sell garden produce. The dead man lay on his back just at the edge of the road. There was a bullet hole in his forehead. A pistol, with one chamber empty lay in fact or two distant from his right hand. The witnesses had hurried into Nineveh and notified the authorities.

Simon Birdsong testified that had feeling had existed between Thomas W. Strickland and Stamford Tucker since the night of the clash between knocked him down a short time later when they again met in the same place. It was generally believed that there would be a bloody encounter between them before the campaign closed. Other associates of the dead man and the accused testified to the same facts.

Mrs. Todhunter, whose appearance as a witness for the state was a dramatic surprise and who was pitifully agitated, testified to the fact of the accusation made against Thomas W. Strickland by Lottie-May Doggett at the reception and hop given by the Nineveh Light Infantry, and her testimony was supported by that of several other ladies who heard the accusation.

Brucker Hopes He'll be First to Fly Across Sea

All the world was aroused by the announcement that Joseph Brucker, formerly of Milwaukee, would attempt to cross the Atlantic ocean from the Canary Islands to America in his giant dirigible. Brucker, who lived in the United States for many years and is an American citizen, says he'll fly or bust. His start was delayed by the gas leaking out of the bag. The top picture shows the great airship ready for flight. The group picture shows Brucker and his party as they appeared in the basket car of the airship for a trial flight.
